WSF AGM IN MARSEILLE

The French city of Marseille hosted the 47th World Squash Federation AGM and Conference, held alongside the WSF Men’s World Team Championship.

The AGM followed the conference day which featured presentations from key people from inside and outside squash to update the delegates from over 40 countries on current initiatives as well as discuss plans for squash’s efforts to secure a place on the Olympic Games 2024 in Paris.

WSF President Jacques Fontaine, himself a Parisian, reminded delegates that although everybody present thinks that squash would be a great addition to the Games programme, the bid must be embraced and promoted by all.

"We know that squash would bring something different and special to the Olympic Games through our wonderful youth, our professional athletes and great staging options," said Fontaine. "So every single player, official and stakeholder should take every opportunity to promote squash to their national media, sports officials and especially influencers. WSF & PSA will lead but it is the sea wave of the whole of squash repeatedly landing that will make the difference."

2017 was not an election year for Board positions, so the main focus of delegates was on the comprehensive updating of the WSF Articles, with proposed amendments to a great many of the current 155 clauses all being agreed.

Estonia and Paraguay become members

A number of changes were 'technical' but included specific amendments made to the system of conducting election ballots; a new process for electing Commission members; and alterations to the composition of the WSF Ethics Commission.

The WSF Forward Plan and budget were also received and endorsed and Estonia and Paraguay welcomed as new members.
Egypt’s ElShorbagy and El Welily Crowned 2017 PSA World Champions

Egyptian duo Mohamed ElShorbagy and Raneem El Welily are the 2017 AJ Bell PSA World Champions after an enthralling day of final action at Manchester Central Convention Complex saw both players enter the history books by lifting the sport’s most prestigious title for the first time.

World No.2 ElShorbagy, a runner-up at this tournament in 2012 and 2014 to compatriot Ramy Ashour, prevailed over younger brother Marwan 11-5, 9-11, 11-7, 9-11, 11-6 in what was the first time two brothers had contested the final of the iconic tournament in its 41-year history.

A nail-biting encounter went all the way down to the wire, until 26-year-old Mohamed fired off seven successive points from 6-4 down in the decider to capture the biggest title of his career and the 30th overall as his stunning form continues.

"It feels great, it’s a dream come true," said ElShorbagy.

"At 11-9 on the fourth it was a huge blow, then I was down in the fifth and I had to fight and fight, he gave it everything. I remember the 2012 match with Ramy, I know how he felt now. There was so much pressure on me, like Ramy in 2012, and in these matches you just want to win the last point.

"At the end we congratulated each other. It was my time today, with this title you have to be patient and it will come for him. I’ve won everything in the sport now, but I still have much more to achieve and more titles to win."

El Welily had also suffered two World Championship final defeats in the past - with the 2014 final seeing her surrender four championship balls against Malaysia’s Nicol David - but it was third time lucky for the Cairo-based World No.2 after she came back from a game down to defeat defending champion Nour El Sherbini.

El Welily had lost out in straight games to El Sherbini in the previous women’s World Championship final, but a resilient El Welily battled back over the course of the next three games, taking a crucial second game on the tie-break, before claiming wins in games three and four to wrap up a 3-11, 12-10, 11-7, 11-5 victory, which sees her capture a 16th career title on the PSA World Tour.

"She was under more pressure than me today," said El Welily.

"I felt so different today compared to the last World Championship final. That one was a nightmare, today I was so much more relaxed.

"So much has changed since 2014. The game has changed, I have changed, the sport is different from then. We’re all adapting and improving. I hope I can keep the same attitude for the remainder of the season. From this moment to the next event I don’t know what will happen, but I know I don’t want to stop with just this one success."

Women’s:

Men’s:

Third time lucky, they say. Try telling that to squash. Three consecutive times this global sport has sought entry to the Olympic Games; three times it has been turned away. As the sport gets its 2017 World Championships underway in Manchester the World Squash Federation (WSF) and Professional Squash Association (PSA), more united than ever before, are preparing the groundwork for yet another push on the Olympic front.

It has been a long and painful campaign thus far. In the aftermath of the latest rejection there were expressions of bewilderment and pain from within the squash ranks.

By the IOC’s own criteria, squash has a strong case for inclusion. The French city of Marseille has just hosted the WSF Men’s World Team Championship, which concluded on Monday with an AGM at which delegates from over 40 countries heard plans for squash’s efforts to secure a place at the Paris 2024 Games.

The WSF President Jacques Fontaine told them: “We know that squash would bring something different and special to the Olympic Games through our wonderful youth, our professional athletes and great staging options.

So every single player, official and stakeholder should take every opportunity to promote squash to their national media, sports officials and especially influencers. WSF & PSA will lead but it is the sea wave of the whole of squash repeatedly landing that will make the difference.”

All about timing

Fontaine, who worked in the watch industry until 2015, knows all about timing. And as President of the French Squash Federation from 1996-2016 he oversaw a period of increased participation in which several European and World Championships were hosted.

Fontaine, who took over from President Ramachandran in November last year, told insidethegames that the mood of the latest Olympic bid by squash is rational and methodical.

Asked if this was a case of “thrice bitten, four times shy”, the President – who recently announced he was “reasonably confident” squash would make the 2024 Games - responded:

“We must be realistic. We know that squash has the attributes to bring something new, fresh and athletic to the Olympic Games programme. We also know that squash is a popular and successful sport in France.

“But what we also know most of all is that we are not the only sport hoping for a place. It will be a challenge for squash to succeed, but real success doesn’t come without one.

“The squash product is a superb one, and of course we have learnt, and have gained experience. The WSF Men’s World Team Championship in Marseille last week has again shown definitively how our sport has changed and will continue to evolve.

“We have with a spirit of learning and humility to make an even better presentation of it on behalf of the sport as a whole and I am sure that we will be well received.”

The biggest challenge

On the subject of what he saw as the biggest challenge in getting squash onto the Olympic programme, Fontaine replied: “Our biggest challenge is how we make sure that we strongly convey everything that squash can bring to Paris 2024. If we do that then we know that we have given the bid everything and can accept any decision.

“I was very proud of the way in which the French Squash Federation mounted the event. The broadcast output using SquashTV production will surely give great figures from Eurosport and so many other outlets. The production is superb and it is a joy to watch squash so effectively.

“And yes, the players are now in Manchester contesting the PSA World Individual Championships – with equal prize money of course! My expectation is that the viewing figures will continue to beat records as there are so many platforms now. The whole media world has changed, and our sport has kept up with it.

“And don’t forget that squash will also be a showcase sport at the Youth Olympic Games next year in Buenos Aires, which we are very excited about.”

France’s strength

Tokyo was always likely to look kindly on baseball and softball, as well as karate, when it came to naming additional events for the 2020 Games. But does Fontaine think it could work for squash in 2024 that France has such a strong presence in the sport, with Gaultier currently men’s No 1 and Serme, the US and British Open champion, third in the women’s list?

“Every host nation hopes to deliver many medals, and for France, that is certainly a possibility,” he said.
We have a pedigree. We have the Men’s World No1, but Gregory Gaultier is not the first from France. That was Thierry Lincou in the last decade. As you say, Camille Serme is flying high too. But it is so much about the future. France had the men’s runner-up in the World Junior Championships earlier this year in Victor Crouin, and our coaches are working hard to deliver more success for the next generation – in time for 2024!

France also has a great track record of hosting World and European Championships all over the country. The WSF Men’s World Team Championship has just finished in the 2024 Olympic sailing city of Marseille – a huge ticketing success - after the Women’s event in Paris last year and earlier events in Nimes, Valenciennes and Mulhouse. There are great audiences for squash in France to spur us on to do this.”

In 2012, while lobbying for Tokyo 2020 inclusion, the then WSF President N Ramachandran said that squash was “totally different from the way it was two or three years ago,” adding: “We have completely changed the game around from the last time we made a bid.”

Innovations included new all glass courts, high definition television coverage and changes to the scoring system to make the game easier to understand. So what else is left to change?

An evolution

“President Ramachandran was right, but change is not a once-only matter, it is an evolution,” Fontaine (left) said. “Squash continues to evolve on and off the court. We have a superb professional Tour with who we now have a strong partnership, which allows us to work together to develop the sport.

“Broadcast is ever more and more important, so is presentation.

“Not just inside the venue but show-courts can even showcase the host city by being placed in outside locations too. But we have also to take into account the 2020 agenda and the double awarding of Paris 2024 and Los Angeles 2028 made in Lima.

“We will be looking at rules, scoring and everything else that is part of the package, and making them better. But we will also be innovating off the court in terms of a new worldwide referring structure to both strengthen and widen officiating – and here the importance of increasing the number of female referees will be important.

“There is also great development work internationally on urban squash programmes led by USA. Squash and education combined in such a way to give youngsters a chance in life where they wouldn’t have had one before.

Overall, it is like they say for cycling – incremental changes. Many small things that taken together can make a real difference.”

PSA MOU

How important, one wonders, is the Memorandum of Understanding recently signed between the WSF and PSA?

“A strong and close relationship with the professional sector is key,” Fontaine replied. “It was something that I said I stood for before I was elected as President a little over a year ago, and I am very proud that with the full support and cooperation of PSA we have achieved it.

“It is more than an MoU - we now have a full agreement and are partners in many areas. It is a win-win for everybody, as we bring our combined resources into play to grow our sport.”

WSF MASTERS TOUR

The WSF Masters Commission are developing a WSF Masters Tour, the plans for which are to:

A. Develop a worldwide identity and linkage for National Masters Opens, Regional Masters Championships and the World Masters as the WSF World Masters Tour.

B. Create (and promote) a single integrated portal for the Tour with greater visibility, consistency and integrated information targeted to Event Organisers, Players and Supporters.

C. Establish a framework and criteria for International Masters Events at each level (National, Regional, World), so that ‘best practice’ is available to adopt.

D. Establish a World Ranking System for Masters to support the existing national and regional systems –particularly to support seeding in World Championship events and as a common reference for players worldwide. (This is intended to be added later if there is seen to be significant inter-regional participation in the Masters Tour to make the rankings as reflective of world standing as possible).

Details will be announced during 2018 as they are finalised.

Favourites Egypt defeated defending champions England in the final of the WSF Men's World Team Squash Championship at Salle Vallier in Marseille to reclaim the World Squash Federation title they lost to England four years ago in Mulhouse, also in France.

England reached the final for the ninth time since 1983 in comfortable style and presented a line-up for the final boasting three players with more than 300 international caps between them - probably the most experienced team ever to represent the country in the 50 years of the tournament!

By contrast the four-man Egyptian squad only included one player who had ever competed in the championship before - yet the three-man team in the final all had rankings within the world top five!

With the agreed playing order being 1, 2, 3, title-holders England presented three-time world champion Nick Matthew, the 37-year-old world No.6 appearing in the event for the seventh time since 2003, to face 26-year-old world No.4 Karim Abdel Gawad, a championship debutant.

Self Inflicted

Matthew (left) was clearly not the player who despatched Australian number one Ryan Cuskelly in straight games just 24 hours earlier. The Yorkshireman was forced to take a three-minute 'self-inflicted injury break' midway through the second game - and it later transpired that he had suffered a minor recurrence of his old ankle injury during the warm-up for the match.

After just 34 minutes, Egypt took the lead when Gawad (pictured above with Matthew) claimed an 11-9, 11-3, 11-7 victory.

Egyptian number two Ali Farag was also making his debut in the final - while English opponent James Willstrop was not only celebrating his fifth successive World Team Championship battle against an Egyptian opponent since 2003, but also his 156th cap for his country.

Former world number one Willstrop, 34, did what he could to keep his 24-year-old opponent at bay - but Farag was clearly on a mission and after 36 minutes clasped his face in his hands as he celebrated his championship-winning 11-5, 11-9, 11-5 triumph.

Bigger than big

"The word big is an understatement - it is much bigger than big!" gushed Farag when asked to comment on the significance of the win. "I felt I had the whole Egyptian squash community on my shoulders. I wanted to make them proud".

Success in Marseille means that Egypt now have all the men's and women's, senior and junior, team and individual WSF and PSA world titles – Except the Men's Junior World Team title, in which final in 2016 the country narrowly lost to Pakistan.

After their shock quarter-final exit to Hong Kong China, hosts France - the third seeds - beat New Zealand in the play-off for fifth place earlier today on the all-glass showcourt at Salle Vallier.

Third string Lucas Serme clinched victory in the decider, beating Kiwi Evan Williams (debutants Iraq and Jamaica)

One of the first positions to be decided amongst the 24 teams was the one for 23rd place - won in impressive style, against the odds, by Iraq, the 24th seeds making their debut in the event.

With 45-year-old Rodney Durbach in the squad, 22nd seeds South Africa ended up in a creditable 18th place after losing 2/0 to 18th seeds Argentina in the play-off for 17th place. Durbach, his country's most capped player, endured his third successive five-game battle, this time narrowly going down 3 - 2.

Despite team number one Borja Golan being unavailable for the last three days due to injury, 12th seeds Spain ended in 11th place to record their highest finish ever in 13 appearances since 1985. Scotland also achieved their best finish since 2003 after taking 8th place.

WSF & PSA ENGAGE WEBER SHANDWICK

WSF in partnership with PSA has appointed Weber Shandwick, one of the world’s leading global communications and engagement firms, as communications campaign partner to provide strategic counsel and global public relations to support the bid for squash to be included in the Paris 2024 Olympic Games Programme.

Commenting on the appointment, WSF President, Jacques Fontaine said: “Becoming a Summer Olympic medal sport has been a long-time dream and goal for the sport of squash. “We are engaging in our fourth bid to be included in the Games’ programme, with more passion and a clearer vision than ever before. Given Weber Shandwick’s vast Olympic experience and its innovative, forward-looking approach, the agency is the preferred partner to help us make the case for our sport.”

The campaign follows the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding between the WSF and PSA enabling the two bodies to work in unison towards achieving a joint vision for the future of squash on a global scale.

PSA Chief Executive Alex Gough said: “The Olympic ambition is a cornerstone of the unified structure that we created with WSF in order to expand squash’s international profile as a sport and grow it at both professional and grass roots levels. Weber Shandwick’s appointment will greatly support us in achieving our joint goal and communicating our cohesive vision.”

Award winning
Weber Shandwick has over 20 years of experience in supporting campaigns related to the Olympic Games, producing award-winning work for successful Olympic bids and Organising Committees.

Svetlana Picou, Chair, Global Olympic and Sport Affairs, Weber Shandwick, commented: “The sport of squash has undergone a significant transformation in recent years, becoming truly innovative, inclusive and urban, while preserving its qualities as a well-established sport. Squash is a perfect blend of unique sport heritage and excitement of the new.

SERNA LINKS BOARDS
At the PSA AGM held in Manchester during the PSA World Championships, World Squash Federation Vice-President Pablo Serna was elected to the PSA Board, becoming the first person to serve both bodies concurrently.

The election of Serna, President of the Colombian Squash Federation, illustrates the very close and strong partnership between WSF, the International Federation for squash, and PSA who are responsible for the administration of both men's and women's professional squash around the world.

"I feel honoured and very happy that, after our member nations recognised my willingness and passion to work for squash by electing me as a WSF Vice President a year ago, now professional players have done so as well. This gives me a great opportunity to continue working for the best of this sport, for which I have devoted everything I can in the past 30 years," commented an elated Serna.

WSF President Jacques Fontaine was equally delighted: "Pablo is a great asset to the WSF Board and I am totally certain that he can provide the strongest link with PSA following his election. I am delighted for him, PSA, WSF and our whole sport.

"I had two key desires that impelled me to stand for the Presidency - a full partnership with PSA, and to work towards squash achieving a place on the Olympic Games programme in 2024. Our relationship with PSA is in place and will be strengthened further with Pablo linking us, and his energy and knowledge for the Olympic bid has already helped me greatly." Serna, who is one year into his first four-year term as a WSF Vice President, has been elected for a minimum term of two years by PSA.

The new PSA Board of Directors:
Chairman: Ziad Al Turki
Men's President: Ali Farag
Women's President: Jenny Duncalf
Board Members: John Nimick, Pablo Serna, Claudia Schürmann, Michael Puertas, Daryl Selby, James Willstrop

RAMY ASHOUR & CAMILLE SERME LEAD 2018
WSF AMBASSADOR VISIT

Egypt’s three-time world champion Ramy Ashour and France’s world No.3 Camille Serme will lead the 2018
WSF Ambassador Programme to Armenia and Ukraine in June next year when the latest World Squash Federation initiative visits the countries’ capitals Yerevan and Kiev, respectively.

Launched in 2011, the inspired WSF international promotional initiative takes two leading squash players, together with an international coach and referee, into younger squash nations to help raise the sport’s profile - through clinics, exhibition matches, refereeing and coaching seminars, and media presentations.

Ashour and Serme, both WSF Ambassador Programme
debutants, will be joined Belgian national coach Ronny Vlassaks and international referee Marko Podgorsek, from Slovenia. The 2018 campaign will take place from 18-24 June.

“We are delighted that Ramy and Camille are able to take time out from their busy international schedules to join us in this vital annual promotional project for the first time,” said WSF CEO Andrew Shelley.

“We all look forward to meeting and interacting with the squash communities, sports authorities and media in Armenia and Ukraine. This opportunity to help younger Federations with their developmental and promotional work is one we relish.”

Ramy Ashour has become one of the sport’s biggest draws. Winner of 39 PSA World Tour titles, including the World Championship in 2008, 2012 and 2014, the 30-year-old from Cairo topped the world rankings for 21 months over a period in which he reached 12 successive Tour finals. France’s most successful female squash player of all-time and a record six-time European champion, Camille Serme achieved a career-high world
No.2 ranking in February this year after winning the prestigious Tournament of Champions title in New York.

The WSF Ambassador Programme first visited the Baltic country of Latvia in 2011, followed by a trip to the African countries of Malawi and Namibia, then Panama and Venezuela in 2013, Papua New Guinea in 2014, before focussing on the Balkan region in 2015 with appearances in Serbia, Romania and Croatia. In 2016, the team visited Dalian and Macau in China. The 2017 edition was postponed until 2018.

SPIN MOVES TO ANNUAL RENEWAL

The WSF Board are expanding specific aims for SPIN in supporting our programmes on behalf of the sport and our stakeholders and enhancing its use as a tool for information flow and providing benefits.

SPIN has now become an annual licence fee for players, team officials and coaches.

One priority is to provide relevant information to all groups, such as rules information, championship details, masters updates, coaching resources etc. This will involve resourcing by WSF. We are also beginning to offer member benefits too such as squash-related discounts that we hope that SPINS will like. Details will be uploaded as they are added.

Registration fee unchanged

The initial Registration fee will be unchanged at £15, but there will be an annual renewal fee for subsequent years set at £10 for adults, and £5 for juniors (still Under 19 on 1st January at the start of the renewal year).

However, WSF is mindful that the current SPIN registered individuals were offered it on a once-for-lifetime basis, so SPINS paid before 31 December this year will not be subject to an annual renewal fee.

Registration Rebates will continue to be offered to Regions and when the planned worldwide refereeing programme - being developed in partnership with PSA
- goes live during 2018, rebates will be offered to Nation Federations for referee course fees. (Details of this will be published during the first quarter of this year).

on objectives such as, securing a place on the Olympic Games programme; maintaining squash’s presence on other international multi-sport games programmes; growing participation levels around the world; and encouraging the development of court facilities in conjunction with centres, local associations and national federations.

AFP REPORTS ON A STIRRING STORY FROM JORDAN

Eleven-year-old Syrian refugee Raghda Hasriyeh whacks a ball against the wall of a squash court as she practices in front of her parents in the Jordanian capital of Amman. Along with a group of other young girls displaced by the war in their homeland, she has been playing the sport for almost a year thanks to a U.S. charity – and now dreams of taking on all-comers.

“I love this sport. I train almost every day,” Hasriyeh said. “I hope I can travel around the world and take part in Arab championships and international ones.”

Since the conflict in Syria broke out in 2011, the U.N. estimates more than 330,000 children have been among the waves of people who fled across the border into Jordan. Five years ago Hasriyeh and her family escaped the bombs and bullets in their battered hometown of Homs before gradually making their way to safety in the kingdom.

“God alone knows what would have happened to my five children and I if I had not decided to flee my country,” her father, Nizar Hasriyeh, said.

Crowded camp near Amman

Life for the family in Jordan has been difficult and they had to move out of a crowded camp to the outskirts of Amman. In those conditions, squash has proved a godsend for the children. “I don’t understand anything about this sport but I am so happy to see my three daughters playing squash. I hope to see them become world champions one day,” Nizar told AFP.

With its costly rackets and purpose-built courts, squash might not seem an obvious choice for children displaced from Syria. But while the game has never been mainstream in the country, it is hugely popular in some parts of the Middle East, most prominently Egypt, and major events are hosted in Qatar.

Reclaim Childhood, the charity behind the program, insists that getting refugee girls involved in the sport can be invaluable in helping them deal with the hardships they face.

“We train five times a week and training includes English lessons aimed at helping them compete in tournaments in Jordan and abroad,” he added.

EL WELILY CLOSES IN ON EL SHERBINI

World Champion Raneem El Welily (left) has closed the gap between herself and current World No.1 Nour El Sherbini in the PSA January Women’s World Rankings.

El Welily, 28, defeated El Sherbini in the final of the women’s PSA World Championships last month to capture the most prestigious title on the women’s Tour for the first time in her career.

Despite her final defeat, El Sherbini retains top spot for a 21st successive month but now sits just over 200 ranking points ahead of El Welily in second - having previously led by over 350 points in December - while the rest of the top five is made up of Camille Serme (3), Laura Massaro (4) and Nouran Gohar (5).

Malaysia’s eight-time World Champion Nicol David remains sixth, while U.S. Open champion Nour El Tayeb’s maiden World Championship semi-final last month sees her move up to seventh. Perry drops a place to eight, while Joelle King and Alison Waters take the last two top ten spots.

Elsewhere, Annie Au stays at No.11, with Tesni Evans on the rise to reach a career-high ranking of No.12 as United States No.1 Olivia Blatchford falls a place to No.13. Joshna Chinappa moves up to No.14, while Emily Whitlock falls two places to No.15.

GAULTIER UNDER THREAT

The release of the January PSA Men’s World Rankings has seen Egypt’s Mohamed ElShorbagy cut the gap between himself and current World No.1 Gregory Gaultier (left) to just 43 points after his PSA World Championship triumph.

ElShorbagy, who held the World No.1 ranking for 28 months between 2014-2017, took a step closer to reclaiming top spot after he defeated Gaultier en route to lifting the biggest title on the Men’s Tour a fortnight ago, beating younger brother Marwan in a historic final victory to finally get his hands on the coveted World Championship trophy.

ElShorbagy will have the chance to surpass Gaultier at the J.P. Morgan Tournament of Champions later this month, with the duo set to meet in a blockbuster final clash inside New York’s stunning Grand Central Terminal.

ElShorbagy sits one place ahead of compatriot Ali Farag, with 2016 World Champion Karim Abdel Gawad and Marwan completing the top five.

Nick Matthew and Tarek Momen come next at six and seven respectively, with Germany’s Simon Rösner rising a place to eight. Egypt’s Mohamed Abouelghar moves into the top 10 for the first time in his career to take the ninth spot as New Zealand’s Paul Coll drops two places ten.

COLOMBIA SWEEPS BOARD

With six gold, two silver and a bronze medal, Colombia were the dominant nation at the recent Bolivarian Games held in their capital city of Bogota recently, as they were in Trujillo Peru four years ago. The event was played at the Complejo De Racuetas De Santa Marta, using four new courts with movable walls for Doubles, the first in the city.

There are eleven countries in the region, contesting 39 sports, with Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, and Venezuela in the hunt for squash medals, with the formats being singles, doubles and team events.

HONG KONG WIN AWARD

Hong Kong Squash have become the first National Sports Association to receive “Directors of The Year Awards 2017” in the categories of Statutory / Non-profit-distributing Organizations by The Hong Kong Institute of Directors. This award recognised achievement in demonstrating the high standards in corporate governance.

Chairman Mr. David Mui (pictured here) and the Association’s General Committee, were commended by the panel of judges saying, “The Board of Hong Kong Squash has established sound principles and procedures in terms of corporate governance, with policies on risk management, financial controls, internal controls, compliance and reporting in place. Its supervision and evaluation of strategic plans developed by the management team contribute to the continual success of the organization. The Board totally deserves the Award.”

NUSEA IS NOW SQUASH & EDUCATION ALLIANCE

When the American National Urban Squash and Education Association was launched in 2005, it was “national” in aspiration more than reality. Four member programs served a total of 250 students in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Things have changed a lot since then. It now has 19 member organizations across the country and four affiliates abroad, with more than 2,500 students enrolled. As the NUSEA network expanded—beyond the United States and outside of major urban centres—the need for a new name became clear. Squash and Education Alliance (SEA), was chosen,

As SEA reported, ‘Every day after school, in cities across the country and beyond, students from underserved communities make their way to our programs to study in classrooms and train on the squash courts. We provide other important services too—mentoring, counselling, travel, career prep, and more — but at our core we help students develop as squash players and prepare for college’.

Naval Pandole, from the Cricket Club of India (CCI), Mumbai has written saying that the CCI has been conducting the CCI Western India Squash Tournament for the last 74 years and the 2018 event will be their 75th consecutive uninterrupted year of holding the event.

He has asked whether we 'have any information of any other organisation in the world that has conducted a Squash tournament uninterrupted for the last 74 years. This request for information is only since the CCI wishes to make something of a celebration for such an important milestone'.

Wars have interrupted many longstanding older events, but do write to Mr Pandole at npandole@gmail.com if you know of an event that can better their record and we will ask him to report back for the next Instant Update.
