WORLD JUNIOR MEN'S TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

Although the ISRF World Junior Team Championship started in 1980, there had been a forerunner operating since 1972. In England it was decided to start a team event to coincide with the British Junior Open, and the first was held between 11 and 13 April 1973. Four countries – England, Scotland, Wales and Sweden – took part at the courts of the National Westminster Bank Sports Ground in South London, playing for a shield presented by the Bank. The event was titled the Junior International Festival. The winners were England (1973–77), Australia (1978) and Pakistan (1979). In 1980 the first of the three-man team events was played, others following on a biennial basis.

WORLD JUNIOR WOMEN'S TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

The Women's World Junior was the last of the mainstream events to be introduced. Indeed, an individual event was started four years before the Team Championship was first added in 1985. In its early years the tournament was supported by a nucleus of eight nations who were supplemented by other countries on an ad hoc basis.

WSF WORLD MASTERS' CHAMPIONSHIPS

When the British Open was staged in London in February 1976, it incorporated the inaugural World Open Championship. Additionally, the ISRF (now WSF) accorded similar status to Veterans and Vintage events (the colloquial titles for the Over 45 and Over 55 age groups). Subsequently age group events became appended to various world team and individual championships until 1991. In that year New Zealand hosted the first World Masters Championships, which were staged purely for mature players.

WORLD INTERNATIONAL DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIPS

Doubles squash has been played since the 1920s on singles courts in many countries, but in 1992 the WSF AGM approved dimensions of 32 feet (9.75m) by 25 feet (7.62m) for international doubles courts and set about the task of promoting doubles. It was agreed that pairs must be from the same member nation and prize money should be paid to encourage top-level participation.

WORLD DEAF SQUASH CHAMPIONSHIPS

The WDSC started after a successful inaugural International Deaf Squash Tournament in April 2001 at England. The Inaugural Tournament was founded with a round robin team tournament between England, Netherlands and Australia. Peter Walters of Australia became the Individual Winner and Australia became the team winner. After the tournament all three countries agreed for the official championships to take place every two years. Following a meeting with WSF, the WSF sanctioned the tournament as the World Deaf Squash Championships. The WSF also donated perpetual shields towards the WDSC.
